

Remembering “Sanctuary Cove” at my Home in Thailand

By Geoff Walker

Nothing extravagant but a place of escape for me. Out of picture to the left was a magnificent array of colorful Orchids, which was my pride and joy. I spent hours tending them every day.

Many an hour has been enjoyed in the secluded surrounds of this sedate little corner of my Thai garden. Well away from the noise, traffic and dust of the city. The only disturbance being the occasional sound of a motor cycle, or perhaps the haunting chants of the Monks at a distant Wat!

The character and ambience of my favorite haunt was always welcoming and conducive to an evening libation or two, just before sundown or during eventide. Many tranquil hours were spent in this little nook, alone or with friends. Such fond memories.
